YANKS BLAST INVASION GATE TO BALKANS

Meandering Along the Main Stem

By WASH FAYETTE

Going through some of the papers in my desk today I found two yellow "dodgers" or hand bills, issued during the days when the Ku Klux Klan was at its peak in Fayette County and Ohio generally.

Now you may think the Ku Klux Klan is a ticklish subject to mention, but I passed through it when the movement was at its height and when it really was "ticklish".

Some of you men who wore a sheet and pillowcase at that time will smile as you read this.

Now getting back to those old hand-bills:

One of them bears the stamp of "John Acors", Exalted Cyclops or something, who helped organize the KKK in Fayette County, and then suddenly vanished.

The hand bill issued by Acors endorsed quite a number of candidates for county office, but omitted others as not being the kind the KKK wished to place the stamp of approval upon.

The second hand bill is a response to the first hand bill, and signed by 18 candidates, some of whom had been endorsed by the KKK and others who had not.

"Who is John Acors?" is asked on the hand bill, which is captioned "Ku Klux Klan or Anti Ku Klux Klan—Take Your Choice".

After stating that Acors "is a paid organizer of the KKK", the hand bill further states:

"The time is here for citizens of Fayette County to determine whether they will handle their own affairs or whether they are to be subject to the dictation and whims of a man whose record is unknown and whose purposes are as mysterious as his eleventh hour circular is—cowardly and unfair."

"The candidates listed below are not affiliated in any way with the Ku Klux Klan, are all American citizens and bona fide residents of Fayette County, who believe in the enforcement of all laws, who disclaim any endorsement by the Ku Klux Klan and who are responsible for circulating this leaflet."

In those days candidates had their problems just as they have today, but at that time the KKK added to the complexities of the campaign.

For short wave weather prognostication, such as foretelling a rainstorm, I think the clerks at the stamp window of the Washington C. H. Post Office have the "Paint Valley Prophet" beaten at least a mile.

When there is a great deal of moisture in the air (humidity) such as usually precedes a rainstorm, the postage stamps are inclined to curl, and the clerks declare that a rain is in the offing, so if you want to know if a rain is approaching too far away to see, just try reading the weather by a postage stamp, and if it curls, it's going to rain, maybe!

KING IN ENGLAND AFTER AFRICAN TRIP

Big Bomber Rides Tailwind In Ahead of Schedule

AN RAF BASE IN BRITAIN, June 25.—(P)—King George VI returned to his homeland today from an extraordinary tour of the North African battlefields.

The king, deeply tanned and smiling, was the first to step from the plane. An RAF guard of honor presented arms.

After inspecting the honor guard, King George was driven to the RAF mess.

The big bomber landed an hour ahead of schedule because of an unexpectedly strong tail wind. A short time later Winston Churchill's automobile speeded up and the prime minister alighted smiling.

The smile disappeared when he was told he was late. Scowling slightly, he was driven to the RAF mess to join the king.

The king's only comment when he alighted was: "A very good trip, indeed."

TWO-PLY CRISIS DEVELOPING IN COAL MINE ROW

War Labor Board Demands Lewis' Union and Operators Comply With Orders

MINERS STILL IN REVOLT

Meanwhile, President Faces Delicate Decision on Law To Put Curb on Strikes

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(P)—President Roosevelt said today he would not recognize or accept an October 31 deadline set by the United Mine Workers for continued coal production in government-operated mines.

The Chief Executive told a press conference he was merely trying to see that coal was mined and this had to be done some way. He added that many of us get away from the fact we are at war and the life of a nation is very much at stake.

The War Labor Board went to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes today with a stern request the government compel the United Mine Workers to comply fully with the board's order or that punishment be imposed.

Board members told Byrnes the country's largest corporations, U. S. Steel (in the Federal ship-building case) and General Motors, complied with WLB orders, however reluctantly, but that in the coal case only the operators have been penalized. Their mines have been seized although they are ready to obey the WLB.

Full compliance would mean the signing of a two-year contract containing a pledge not to strike for the duration of the war. The contract handed down by the board would permit reopening of

UNREST IN ITALY SEEN IN SHAKE-UP

More Than 700 Anti-Fascists Reported Arrested

LONDON, June 25.—(P)—Premier Mussolini of Italy presided today at a meeting of the Fascist National Party Director at the Palazzo Venezia, the Rome radio announced in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.

A Reuters recording of a Rome radio broadcast said that after the meeting this communique was issued: "The party membership now is being withdrawn from all those Fascists who do not serve the country and the Fascist regime with a religious fervor according to the directives given by the Duce."

From Bern yesterday came a dispatch that the arrest of more than 7,000 anti-Fascist and other dissidents had been effected by Italian police. The report was not confirmed from other sources.

Devastating Air Attack Faced By Italy

BY JOHN F. CHESTER

BOSTON, June 25.—(P)—A prediction American and British airmen will give Italy "a hammering such as no country has ever received before" came today from Edward Kennedy, veteran Associated Press foreign correspondent, after a tour of war coverage unparalleled in the middle eastern and North African theaters.

Kennedy, sun-tanned, lean and hardened, holds a record as the only newspaperman who covered the middle eastern and North African wars from the time the first shot was fired by Italy in 1940 until the last German surrendered after Tunis and Bizerte fell. He gave his views after returning on his first vacation since before the war.

"Conditions are perfect for giving the Italians a terrific pasting from the air," he said. "The skies are so blue, with few clouds and no fog, that the amazing American bombsight is operating with uncanny accuracy. Distances are short, enemy resistance is light and Allied casualties are comparatively few. The United States Air Forces already have done a job of bombing that has been unequalled in this war."

"In my opinion, the African campaign was not a second front. It was a first front, for it kept the Mediterranean open, exposed the Axis' Achilles heel—Italy—to attack, and established a shelf of aggression 2,500 miles long from which a death blow can be launched at the Axis. A large, well-trained force is ready and they have terrific supplies."

Here are some of the thoughts of a war correspondent as he retraced a blood-stained route from Spain to the Balkans and the middle east in an interview here:

"It was in Spain that I first saw the German 88 MM. gun. And up until nine months ago it was the best gun in Africa."

"The American 90 MM and 155 MM guns changed all this. It was the 155's which pounded Mateur to pieces and really opened the gateway for the final American drive."

"After Spain, I went to Rome and was there when Mussolini announced he would not go into the war immediately. At that moment he reached the height of his popularity."

"The campaign in Greece was horrible. One of the worst days was an Easter Sunday near a tiny village on the River Lethe. The villagers were cooking their Easter lamb. Then the bombers came—150 of them by twos and threes, steadily for an hour and a half until there was little or nothing left."

"After returning to Egypt and moving back and forth across the desert, the turn of the war finally came at Alamein."

"The British by then had learned all the German tricks. They had achieved the coordination of the Afrika Korps. Man for man they were more courageous and better fighters than the Germans."

FIRST ATTACK ON GREEK PORT MADE BY ALLIES

Nearly 150 Tons of High Explosives Dumped on Salonika Axis Bases

ALL BOMBERS COME BACK

Meanwhile, Ruhr War Plants Smashed in 'Great Force' By Allied Warplanes

By ROGER GREENE

(By The Associated Press)
American Liberator bombers striking at the Greek port of Salonika, historic invasion gateway to the Balkans in World War I, dropped more than 250,000 pounds of explosives on the Axis-occupied Sides airdrome yesterday in the first attack there of the war, Allied headquarters announced.

More than 50 of the big four-engined U. S. planes flew 1,000 miles round-trip across the Mediterranean to attack the key Aegean sea port. All returned safely.

"Direct hits were scored on hangars and all are believed to have been destroyed," a communique said.

From Northwest African bases 300 U. S. bombers and fighters raked enemy airdromes, docks, shipping and rail targets in Sardinia, and other Allied planes attacked Sicily just off the toe of the Italian boot.

In northern Europe, RAF bombers in great force renewed the assault on Nazi war sinews in the Ruhr, smashing at the chemical center of Wuppertal.

The British Air Ministry has defined a "great force" as sufficient to wipe out a city of 200,000 population in a single night.

Blasting their way through stiff Nazi aerial defenses and anti-aircraft fire, the big RAF block-buster raiders unloaded hundreds of tons of bombs on such targets as the I. G. Farbenindustrie chemical works, the Jaeger roller bearing plants and textile factories. It was the sixth consecutive night attack on the continent.

Meanwhile, a Berlin broadcast quoted Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels as asserting that the Axis was keeping vigil "day and night" to meet an Allied invasion of Europe.

Nazis Admit Havoc
Goebbels boasted, however, that there was "no comparison between fighting in North Africa or for Pantelleria and fighting for Europe."

The German high command, admitting the havoc inflicted by Allied warplanes, said the RAF heaped destruction on Wuppertal and nearby Remscheid, site of important railway shops, and added: "Losses among the populations of the towns attacked are heavy."

Wuppertal is the name for the twin industrial cities of Elberfeld and Barmen on the Wupper River. Wuppertal has 400,000 population.

Upwards of 1,500 tons of explosives were dropped on Barmen in an RAF raid on May 29 which virtually destroyed that sector.

Last night the attack was concentrated on Elberfeld, and an RAF communique announced that "from preliminary reports great damage appears to have been done."

Thirty-three RAF bombers were missing from the night's operations, making a six-day total of 135 Allied bombers lost in the tempestuous campaign to pulverize Adolf Hitler's Ruhr war factories.

In the Mediterranean, American four-engined bombers from the Middle East raided the historic Greek port of Salonika for the first time, blasting the Sides airdrome and leaving three hangars in flames.

Salonika, a major port on the Aegean Sea, has figured in Balkan speculation as a potential tar-

Inflation Dangers Cited By President Opposing Food Czar

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(P)—President Roosevelt spoke out again today against the setting up of a so-called food czar and said that the question at issue is whether we are for inflation or against it.

He told a press conference Congress could take the path toward inflation if it wanted to, but that if it did the responsibility would rest 100 percent on the legislators.

Suggestions that someone be given complete authority over all phases of the food program he characterized as close to a red herring. The real question, he said, is whether prices are to be kept down and whether we want to go into an inflationary spiral or not.

Suppose we had the Angel

GENERAL MISSING IN YANKS' KIEL RAID

Flying Fortress Last Seen Spiraling Down

LONDON, June 25.—(P)—Brig. Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest was listed officially today as missing after the Eighth U. S. Air Force's mass raid on Kiel, June 13, but some hope still was held out that the great grandson and namesake of the famed Southern general may be living.

The 38-year-old general went on the raid as an observer in the lead bomber and other fliers saw his damaged plane drop out of a returning formation and spiral down still under control. They were not able to watch the Flying Fortress all the way down, however, because of heavy fighter opposition which turned the raid into one of history's greatest aerial fights.

Gabriel as a food czar, the chief executive remarked. How is he going to get more food to the people at the present cost?

Sure, he went on, we all favor growing more in 1944, that would be grand. But he said it would not take care of late 1943 or early 1944 and that Congress could not take care of that period, or a food czar.

Some people on Capitol Hill, the president asserted, think the

NEUTRAL FRONT PUT UP BY TURKISH PROPAGANDA

ANKARA, Turkey, June 23.—(Delayed)—(P)—The Quasi-official Istanbul newspaper Aksham said today that "Turkey's relations with Britain and America in no way warrant any expectations" that Turkey will abandon her neutrality and participate in the war.

The editorial was written by Necmeddin Sadak, a former diplomat with close connections in the foreign office. It attacked Axis claims that America and Britain were trying to push Turkey into the war.

Corn Held In Elevators Is To Be Requisitioned To Make War Products

Pork chops from a wild hog taste pretty good, especially when they are the first fresh meat a soldier has had since he left the United States to go to the Far East with America's armed forces.

You can take that from a Washington C. H. boy who knows whereof he speaks.

Staff Sergeant Forest L. Crabtree wrote to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Crabtree, Cherry Street, from Iran (formerly Persia) where he was stationed at the time, that he got some time off one day and went a short way back of his camp into the jungle and shot a wild hog and took it back to camp where he dressed it for a special dinner for a group of his buddies.

He enclosed a snapshot of the big boar's head surrounded by some of the men of his company and a British army officer with some of the natives standing nearby looking on admiringly.

The wild hog weighed 300 pounds, Sgt. Crabtree wrote his parents.

"It was the first fresh meat we had had since we left the good old U. S. A.," he continued in his letter, "and while we enjoyed the pork chops they were nothing like those from fine Fayette County hogs we used to get from Bill Anderson (Anderson's Market) at home."

Sgt. Crabtree wrote his parents that the people where he is (Iran

MORE OPPRESSION HEAPED ON JEWS

Moss Exodus from France Now Anticipated

(By The Associated Press)
The German propaganda agency Transocean declared last (Thursday) night that promulgation of a new decree depriving an estimated 100,000 Jews of French citizenship was expected to "result in a mass exodus of Jews from France."

The order, signed by Pierre Laval, was to become effective next Sunday, under it all Jews naturalized in France since 1927 would be deprived of citizenship rights, the agency said in a dispatch broadcast by the German radio and recorded by The Associated Press.

FOUR T. B. CASES ARE REPORTED AT CLINIC HERE

Thirty-one Are Examined at Quarterly Clinic Held by County Association

Of the 31 persons examined at the quarterly chest clinic held here under the joint sponsorship of the Fayette County Tuberculosis and Health Association and the Fayette County Board of Health, four positive cases were noted in the report just now being released. Six other cases were labeled "suspects" and the remaining examinations showed no symptoms of the disease, the report discloses.

The clinic was held earlier this month with Dr. B. L. Chipley of the Mt. Logan Sanatorium the examining physician.

Some of those for whom appointments had been made for the clinic failed to appear for examinations, the report said. Included among them were several who showed symptoms of tuberculosis when the skin tests were made last spring. Warren M. Durkee, the president of the association, pointed out that these not only were neglecting their own health but were remaining as a possible source of tuberculosis infection to all with whom they come in contact.

One of the four positive cases found at the June clinic is now receiving care at Mt. Logan Sanatorium, it was said, and arrangements are nearing completion for similar treatment of one other.

Two of the cases diagnosed as active tuberculosis at the June clinic were from among the 39 who showed a positive reaction to skin tests during the spring early diagnosis campaign.

These examinations and clinics are financed by the Fayette County Tuberculosis and Health Association (formerly the Christmas Seal Committee) from funds raised through the sale of Christmas Seals.

at the time of writing) are "very religious and very poor." They all live in mud huts, he wrote and added that "the natives are friendly and think a lot of the American soldiers."

Sgt. Crabtree assured his parents he was in "good health and feeling fine" but said that he hoped the war would be won before many more American soldiers have to go overseas to fight. In a post script he wrote "tell all my friends hello and give my regards to all of them."

Mr. and Mrs. Crabtree have two other sons in the country's armed forces. Master Sergeant Gaines Crabtree, Jr., is stationed at Camp Beauregard, La., and Pvt. Donald Crabtree is at Patterson Field, near Dayton.

Sgt. Crabtree entered the service at Ft. Hayes in Columbus, February 10, 1942, and was sent to a camp in Wyoming for his first training. Later he was transferred to Texas where his training was intensified and he was acclimated to conditions similar to those of the land to which he was to be sent.

His parents never learned just when he left the United States for foreign service but they believe it was in November of last year, for the last letter they had from him in this country was postmarked November 25 and mailed in San Francisco. Although they believe he sailed from the west coast, they said his present address was "in care of the postmaster at New York." They did not hear from him again until May 15 of this year.

INFLATION DANGERS
CITED BY PRESIDENT
OPPOSING FOOD CZAR

easiest way to use up surplus buying power is to let prices go sky high. And, speaking in a sarcastic manner, he said he had heard some one on the radio suggest the same thing.

This latter person, Mr. Roosevelt said, asserted the rich people would be able to pay higher prices and the poor would suffer but that surplus buying power would be eliminated.

Mr. Roosevelt agreed that the poorer people certainly would suffer under such conditions.

Describing what he meant by an inflationary spiral in response to a question, the chief executive said that the cost of food is about a third of a family's income, and with larger wages, everybody is eating more now at greatly increased prices.

People with the largest financial gains, he said, still have a surplus of funds even after buying their War Bond quotas, and if prices keep going up a lot of people, most of them relatively small wage earners, will have to spend a great deal more for food.

Then they will demand more pay and probably get it, he said, which would mean production costs and costs to farmers would go up. That would lead to requests for higher wages, he said, and then cost to farmers would rise again, and so on.

The president entered a denial when asked about reports that Food Administrator Chester Davis had submitted his resignation because he felt he has inadequate powers.

Mr. Roosevelt said the last he had heard from Davis was when he asked the administrator if the latter would like to run the Office of Price Administration and Davis replied: God forbid.

"It has been said he wants to control farm prices," a reporter said. "Is there any decision on that?"

No, the chief executive responded, but suppose he did control them, or a czar controlled them, what would happen to the cost of food to consumers? Would he keep the cost down to present levels or let the cost go higher? Somebody has to answer that question, he declared.

Mr. Roosevelt said the last he had heard from Davis was when he asked the administrator if the latter would like to run the Office of Price Administration and Davis replied: God forbid.

"It has been said he wants to control farm prices," a reporter said. "Is there any decision on that?"

No, the chief executive responded, but suppose he did control them, or a czar controlled them, what would happen to the cost of food to consumers? Would he keep the cost down to present levels or let the cost go higher? Somebody has to answer that question, he declared.

WHAT HAPPENED TO FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

AFTER SEVEN WEEKS of intensive work, laboratory researchers have discovered the reason why certain batches of Fletcher's Castoria caused nausea.

Methods of preventing a recurrence of the trouble are now known and manufacture is being resumed.

No Fletcher's Castoria has been made during this seven-week period, and at its beginning the makers issued a nationwide warning to consumers and retailers not to use or sell the product and to return all stocks for destruction.

The U. S. Food and Drug Administration has been kept informed of all these developments.

Q. What caused the trouble?

A. The sugar content of Fletcher's Castoria was reduced to conserve sugar under wartime conditions. A year ago, Castoria was made with this reduced sugar content and was up to standard in every respect. This year, in March, we again started production with reduced sugar.

However, at that time a chemical change—harmless in itself—occurred in the characteristics of the water used in making Castoria. But this change, in combination with the reduced sugar, increased the degree and rate of normal fermentation. The more rapid fermentation retarded normal re-oxidation during the aging process, resulting in a product which caused nausea.

Q. Why didn't normal tests show that something was wrong?

A. The changes which occurred were so elusive that they could not be detected by the regular testing procedures—procedures which had kept Castoria a respected product for more than twenty-five years. In fact, even after the nauseating effect was discovered in actual use, it took weeks of laboratory research to identify the factors that were causing the trouble.

Q. What are the makers doing to prevent a recurrence of the trouble?

A. Now that the cause is known, procedures have been put in effect which will assure normal re-oxidation of the pro-

HIGHWAY NEEDS

If there is one thing we have learned from World War No. 2, it is how completely our people have come to depend upon automotive transportation. Yet it has become so commonplace that comparatively few stop to realize that this miracle in the movement of men and materials has been achieved in the brief span of forty years; that at the turn of the century we had in this country fewer than 5,000 automobiles, no trucks, no buses and no roads worthy of the name.

But even then, a few believers in the future of the motor car were blazing trails through mud to points distant from their own homes. Among these were pioneers in the automotive industry. As the number of motorists increased there came a demand for roads and roads in turn brought more motorists. But generally speaking the roads stretched only to state and sometimes only county lines. There was no uniform system of connecting highways.

With the characteristic determination of Americans with a purpose, there was launched an organized movement to get America out of the mud. It resulted in the creation of the federal-aid policy of federal and state cooperation in the building of a system of highways connecting at state lines. Through the years it has proven a sound and working policy—a plan of cooperation which has had general support.

Today some 25,000,000 passenger automobiles and 5,000,000 trucks and buses move daily over more than a million miles of surfaced roads. Every nook and corner of our vast country is connected by highways, our whole economic and social fabric is knotted together by the threads of automotive transportation.

What of the future? It is secure so far as vehicles are concerned, because with the coming of peace the automotive industry now making implements of war will again make motor vehicles. In the meantime, we are conserving our vehicles, our tires and our gasoline. If the war runs long, we may have to practice a greater degree of conservation.

But the highway situation demands serious attention. New construction to replace worn-out roadways has been virtually halted due to the shortage of critical materials. Existing roads are getting a terrific pounding under heavy wartime traffic and repairs are difficult. Manpower and materials are not available to the extent they are needed. In some localities road funds have piled up and quick action is necessary to see that they are safeguarded for the future.

Fortunately, the spirit that motorized America still lives. The automotive and related industries, federal and state highway officials, motor clubs and others who helped to get us out of the mud are alert to the problem. They are organizing to preserve the federal-aid principle and to assure resumption, after the war of the road development program. They have the support of congressional leaders, some of whom helped to fashion the federal-aid policy a quarter century ago. It all furnishes new hope that the

BOMBING LOSSES

The six to one ratio which our bombing missions have hung up against Nazi planes over the Reich, is gratifying evidence both of the fire-power of the planes and the skill and courage of the crews.

But in casting up the material score we must have in mind that this still is not fair exchange. We are losing Flying Fortresses and Liberators; we are destroying smaller machines. When one of our planes falls we can expect to lose eight men although some are saved. The Germans often save the one or two men in their smaller fighting planes, when downed.

The exchange favors us only because we can afford it for the sake of the enormous damage the big bombers do before they are lost.

DIDN'T WORK BEFORE

Those who urge that we now promise absolute to the German people if they will overthrow Hitler are on the wrong track. In World War I we gave them absolute in return for their overthrowing the kaiser, and in less than five years they were preparing for World War II. For Germany and Japan there can be only one ultimatum—unconditional surrender, and for any postwar mercy thank our discretion, not our pity.

"Winning the war" will take longer that way and will cost more in lives and treasure. But it will be genuine victory, which might last for a while, and not the uneasy armistice that Versailles produced.

Washington at a Glance

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — When the Connally-Smith anti-strike legislation was laid on the President's desk, Mr. Roosevelt was "on the spot" as he has been few times before in the 10 years he has been in the White House.

There were only three possibilities: (1) to veto the measure; (2) to sign it; and (3) to allow it to become law after ten days, without signature. For all practical and political purposes, the last two could be grouped together, with the split-hair exception that in the later case the President would be dodging the issue by allowing to become a law a bill for which he had no enthusiasm.

The President and his advisers must have seen that signing the bill would alienate labor. The A. F. L. through William Green and the C. I. O. through Philip Murray protested it and appealed for a veto. A number of other independent unions joined in the parade.

To antagonize this great bloc of voters meant to jeopardize the fourth term or at least control of the 1944 ballots to such an extent that all the President's plans for prosecution of the war or promulgation of the Four Freedoms peace might be sidetracked in a new and hostile administration. On the other hand, veto of the bill meant it would be immediately interpreted politically as a fourth term bid. Commentators would figure that the President was afraid of labor.

To veto the measure meant several things more. It meant alienation of the votes in the purely agricultural states (many of them in the South and Southwest, where political wounds are just now being healed), and going against the expressed opinions of many youngsters in the services. Some of the boys in uniform have publicly expressed dissatisfaction with the attitude of labor. They think that something must be done to curb strikes that interfere with the flow of vital war materials.

Furthermore, to veto the bill or sign it meant to play right into the hands of some of the more politically-minded members of Congress. If they had any sense of humor left about the very unfunny spot they were placed in, the President and his advisers must have gotten a chuckle out of scanning the names of 100 Democrats and 131 Republicans who voted for the bill in the House and 63 Senators who cast their "yeas." Here were friends and foes alike and among the foes a good many who must have had a wicked glint in their eyes and a "How are going to wriggle out of this, Mr. President," on their tongues.

Whether you are Republican or Democrat, pro or anti-New Deal, you might well give a moment to pitying the poor President in a spot like that.

Rationing's Effect on Diet whom I knew in Edinburgh many years ago somewhat to the following effect:

"In the city of Edinburgh, which comprises nearly a million souls, every morning there is left on every doorstep one bottle or two bottles of milk. The household may need three bottles of milk, and if that is the case, three bottles of milk are left on the doorstep."

"This intricate arrangement has been made possible by the development of capitalism. I doubt whether or not an entirely Socialistic government could deliver exactly the precise number of bottles of milk on the proper doorstep as required by the citizens of Edinburgh every morning, Saturday and Sunday included, every day in the year."

There's a Change Due

The quotation indicates to my conservative mind that when the emergency is all over it is most unlikely that the distribution of food will be left in the hands of the bureaucrats. They have not shown any conspicuous knack in conducting an over-all paternal management of the distribution of food, nor adjusting food prices to the pocketbook level of the average American family.

Undoubtedly part of the confusion is due to the fact that Americans are unaccustomed to working on a point ration system. And that is a good augury for the future. But the way in which one commodity is advertised as very scarce one week and then the next week is so plentiful that its ration point value must be reduced in order to use up the surplus must drive a Socialistic-minded Harvard bureaucrat nuts. Again I am encouraged because it shows that the law of supply and demand still works no matter how much they attempt to caulk up the holes in the dam, and I like to live in a world of law and order.

Another less economical spectacle, and one which I think involves a mistake, is the result of putting a time limit on when a certain ration stamp can be used. The American housewife who is naturally a thrifty soul finds herself Saturday with a whole page of stamps which will be useless Monday. So she proceeds to market, buys a number of things she does not immediately need and with the help of others like her, cleans out all the grocery stores and markets, so that even the cockroaches are feeling a depression.

No Malnutrition

On the whole from the standpoint of a nutritionist, in spite of the fluctuating announcements, I cannot see that anyone is really suffering from malnutrition, and in many cases there is evidence that changes of dietary habits are beneficial.

I do not believe from the study of such authoritative surveys as I have been able to obtain that the diversion of food to civilian populations of other lands threatens to impose any deficiencies on the American people. The severest criticism of the Surplus Commodities Corporation which I have read concludes that at one time the corporation had stored enough food to supply a full month's ration of 48 points for half a million people. And that is not serious, because the stores were not perishable and will be used somewhere, some time.

Still and all, during an Administration based upon Jeffersonian principles, we can recall with satisfaction for postwar purposes the words of the Great Deceitmaker that: "If it were left to Washington to tell us when to plow and plant and reap, we would all starve."

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

JEAN WAS awakened at noon by the rattle of carts on the cobblestone street below her window. Warm, mid-day sun had fallen like a golden blanket across her bed. She opened her eyes to blink into the glare, stretched for a brief luxurious moment, and then relaxed while she listened to the jabbering peons in the street, their voices rising and falling in a symphony of sound. Small birds were scolding noisily as they darted in and out of the shining red plume of bougainvillea that partially covered her window. Her heart was singing as she thought of the night before. A night which had begun like a terrifying nightmare and ended like the last lovely notes of a song. Her body still felt the warmth of his embrace, the fervor of his kisses, the gentle strength that seemed to flow from his encircling arms. She remembered, too, the embarrassment on Steve's grim face as he came out to leave. His quick apology.

"Sorry I yelled so at you tonight. I guess it was just the tension. Sleep as late as you can tomorrow—there's nothing urgent!" Curley had brought her back to the hotel.

All the crowding strain of the past few days seemed to have fallen away as Jean dressed leisurely. She stood a long moment in front of her wardrobe trunk, her fingers running lightly over her array of frocks in search of one to blend with her soaring spirits. Her eyes fell on a gay, bright yellow linen dirndl that looked spun from the rays of the sun. She slipped it on, then turned to her mirror to twist her hair into a high, gleaming coil.

As she put the last quick touch of red to her lips and pulled from her drawer a handbag that was a large square of soft powder blue, she reflected that the landlady would be busy in the kitchen now with the noonday meal. She would not bother her for any breakfast. She was in no mood to bother anyone. Life was too shining at that moment!

She ran lightly down the narrow stairway into a street awash with color and laughter, and walked the short block to the little pink adobe that was filled with the Manzanares. Her approach had been heralded and the doorway was filled with the breadth of smiling Senora Manzanares, and four big-eyed youngsters.

"Come in, come in, my dear!" the woman beamed. "The doctor he is just here and he says the boy he is going to be fine! We have you to thank, senorita—you and that gran hombre, Senor Curley! Ah!" she rolled her large eyes heavenward. "That Curley is one great gringo. Everyone in Santa Carlos loves him and now I guess I love him too!" Jean smiled as she thought how Curley had pinched Senora Manzanares' fat cheek before he had left last night and teased gaily, "It was for you, my beautiful one, that I REALLY made that airplane trip!"

This morning, the youngster was sleeping quietly, and a slight color had come back again to his cheeks. Jean looked down at him tenderly. "He is such a cute little fellow," she whispered. "He is my littlest one." Senora Manzanares breathed with reverence in her voice. "Someday he be a gran hombre—maybe even as grande as that gringo Curley!" Jean was glad her face was turned away so Senora Manzanares couldn't see the sudden flush she could feel on her cheeks. Glancing at the watch on her wrist she gave a small cry.

"It's past 1 o'clock and I haven't been to the office yet. I must run along. I'll stop in again for a minute tonight, and I'm so glad the boy is here."

She hurried back to the hotel courtyard for the station wagon and drove to Tony's for some coffee and a doughnut, waving aside the little Mexican's protests that that was no kind of way to eat both breakfast and lunch. She was eager now to get back to her desk. There were those inter-office communications to get out, and the mail.

As she drove the car along the sun-filled road toward the plant she felt that every headache, every tear, had suddenly been justified in the last few hours. Life had a definite pattern that was good if you saw things through to the end.

The plant, looming ahead, broke into her thoughts. The long chain of white buildings stood out boldly in a waving sea of guayule plants. She swung the dust-covered car into the parking space marked "Private," and slid from the seat.

The guard at the gate touched his cap and smiled admiringly at her fresh loveliness as she went through. She was glad she had chosen this frock; yellow, she knew, brought out the best in her radiant skin, her blue eyes, the blond sweep of her hair. Steve glanced up from his desk as she entered her office and she sang out a cheery "Good morning." She saw he was pale and tired and, though his smile was warm enough, he nodded only briefly and then let his eyes fall back to his work.

In the neat pile on her desk were pages of notes to be typed, written in Steve's bold hand. She tossed her handbag on top of a file case and settled down to three hours of urgent work. Her slender fingers flew over the keys as the shadows on the floor grew longer. When the quizzing bell rang at five, Steve buzzed for her. She swept up pencil and notebook and went to sit beside his desk. For a moment he didn't look up, and when he did his face seemed suddenly older, more severe.

"There are no more letters that have to go tonight," he said, almost awkwardly. "It's well—it's just that I'm sorry for the way I spoke to you last night."

She returned his gaze squarely. "I deserved it. Unbalanced impulse is a pretty serious offense in times like this. But Steve," she added abruptly, "it was proof that the Parkinsons aren't guilty, wasn't it? I think we've all been very unfair to them. We've let our imaginations run away with us. All the evidence that we have is purely circumstantial and could be applied to the owners of any large ranch that happened to be near a war plant."

"In other words," Steve said dryly, "you were so dazzled last night by the heroism of Curley that you couldn't think bandily of anyone today?"

"Aren't you talking a bit like a schoolboy?" Jean said shortly.

"Schoolboy or not," said Steve quietly, "just remember when Curley proposes to you that dashing, brave deeds, for beautiful senoritas, are his best specialty. You know, in married life there'd be a long time between to think of paying the butcher and the baker!"

Jean felt the color rising in her cheeks.

"Who said anything about marriage?" she flared. "Can't I admire a man for his courage without marrying him?"

A queer, cynical smile passed over Steve's face. He raised an eyebrow. "I don't know. Can you?" he said.

Mrs. B. E. Kelley Is Hostess to Luncheon for Thursday Kensington Club

Twenty Members and One Guest Hospitably Entertained with Lovely Luncheon

At a delightful luncheon Mrs. B. E. Kelley graciously filled the roll of hostess to twenty members and one guest of the Thursday Kensington Club when she entertained at the Devins Party Home Thursday noon.

Mrs. Kelly carried out her decorations with an eye to beauty as well as patriotism. The flowers as well as foods were in red, white and blue. She used a vase of delicate blue which she brought from the Van Briggie Pottery Work in Colorado Springs, Colorado. This was placed on a mirror and filled with exquisite red and white carnations, blue delphinium and bristol fairy. The blue vase formed the centerpiece for the dining table which seated 12 guests and similar centerpieces were used for small tables around which the remaining guests were seated.

Many bouquets of flowers were placed on the mantel and tables, filling the air with a pleasing fragrance.

Place cards were embossed with tiny flags and each guest presented with a favor fashioned to resemble a firecracker five or six inches in length. Inside each firecracker was placed a handkerchief imported from England and purchased in Canada. Mrs. Kelley has made a practice of bringing each member of the club a gift from her vacation trips.

The elaborate three-course luncheon was unusually tasty due to the careful planning of the hostess and expert cuisine of Mrs. Devins. A combination of eye-appeal as well as delicious food caused her guests to pronounce the luncheon an outstanding success.

In the afternoon Mrs. Kelley showed the members of the club pictures and souvenirs brought back from a trip to Canada last summer. One of her hobbies is collecting silver spoons and she has a spoon from 43 states and several provinces of Canada. Each spoon has the city and state where it was purchased engraved on the handle.

Mrs. George L. Parkin of Hamilton, Ohio, daughter-in-law of Rev. and Mrs. G. B. Parkin, was included with the members of the Thursday Kensington Club at the luncheon.

Fall Styles Go Ultra Feminine

NEW YORK — With all the hushed fanfare of pre-war Paris, New York's big-time designers are staging their fall opening a full month earlier than usual this year, revealing the new silhouette.

Ultra-feminine is the word for it. Though fall styles are straight and narrow, cut on minimum yardage and faithful to the WPB-decreed body basic, they are artfully cut to glorify the female form divine.

Interest is concentrated above the belt, with draped necklines, square shoulders and a feminine molding of the torso the most important notes. Skirts are slim and straight, but designers achieve a graceful softness by use of tied belts, slight front fullness, fake peplums.

Nettie Rosenstein concentrates on her superb "little black dress," usually innocent of trimming but beautifully sculptured to accentuate the bustline, minimize the waist. Her models wear huge gobs of gold costume jewelry.

Foxbrowne presents a collection of Chinese-influence short dinner gowns worn with beaded ornaments that perch just above the eyebrows, in the manner of Chinese ladies of high degree. She combines vivid colors in slim one or two-piece street dresses.

Claire McCardell makes warmth her watchword for fall fashions, presents long underwear in vivid colors, reaching unashamedly to wrist and ankles and worn with short sleeved jumpers of corduroy or wool.

Thursday Bridge Meets with Mrs. Harold Slagle

Mrs. Harold Slagle entertained her bridge club Thursday evening, including three guests with the members.

During the course of the evening, the hostess served tasty refreshments to the two tables of friends.

PLAN POST-WAR CONSTRUCTION ALL OVER STATE

Local Officials Attend Big State Wide Meeting In Columbus

Post war construction of highways and streets was the theme of a two days statewide conference held in Columbus Thursday and Friday, and attended by some 900 city and county officials from throughout Ohio, including officials from Washington C. H. and Fayette County.

The conference had a four-fold purpose, provide for unemployment after the war; develop a long-range highway and street construction program to guard against a surplus of labor which would make improvised relief work necessary; insure a maximum volume of work commensurate with available funds and enable the building of long-deferred highways.

Attending the meeting from Fayette County were: Commissioners Homer Miller, Jean S. Nisley and Tom Parrett and County Engineer Robert E. Willis, while from the city, City Manager Edwin Ducey and City Auditor Glenn B. Rodgers were present.

The gist of the first day's meeting was that all city and county officials are to have their engineers present definite plans and specifications for the projects they wish carried out in their respective communities.

Immediately the question of paying the expensive engineering costs in connection with plans for construction in the smaller towns, was raised and this seems to be one of the chief stumbling blocks to the proposal insofar as the smaller places are concerned.

The conference was a busy one, with only part of those attending being able to present any definite suggestions to what they desired.

All were instructed to present their proposals in concrete form, including general plans and specifications.

Post-war construction of a number of toll roads similar to the Pennsylvania toll highway, was predicted by Charles M. Upham, of Washington D. C., engineer-director of the American Road Builders Association, who said high-speed highways would be popular in the U. S. after the war.

A 50 percent increase in automobile traffic above the peak year ever recorded in America, was foreseen by Upham.

It was stated that the Pennsylvania toll road had not only paid for maintenance and other expenses the first year, but had netted $1,000,000.

Hal G. Sours, state highway director, urged creation of local committees to plan a streamlined road construction program, geared to needs of their communities, which he said would be used in drafting a state-wide building pattern after the return of peace.

Murray D. Shaffer of Mansfield, the department's chief engineer, said that the state's construction program included 900 projects involving expenditure of $150,000,000, much of it in and near metropolitan areas.

THURSDAY WAS HOTTEST DAY

Friday Morning Temperature One of Highest of The Season

Thursday, with a peak temperature of 95, according to Chalmers Burns, U. S. Weather Observer, was the hottest day of the season to-date, and Friday started out with indications of another "scorching," the mercury standing at 77 at 8 A. M.

The intense heat, accompanied by a great deal of humidity, caused widespread discomfort, and slowed up work on the farm. It was also severe weather on livestock, particularly hogs, and some losses due to the heat were reported.

Thursday's peak temperature was one degree above that of Tuesday, when the reading was 94. During several days recently the reading has been 90 to 93 in some of the hottest June weather on record here.

Benefit payments to jobless workers in the Washington C. H. area followed the downward trend in the state during the month of May, U. S. Employment Compensation Bureau representatives said Friday.

Benefit payments in the Washington C. H. area which comprises Fayette County amounted to $269.72 while payments for the entire state totaled $109,106.

Lawton Strawsburg said he had been informed by BUC Administrator, Hugh S. The five month total for 1943 was $1,015,093 while during the first five months of 1942 payments amounted to more than $9,250,000.

An average of five persons per week receive benefits in this area, according to Strawsburg. There were no new claims filed in this area during May. The total for the state was 2,726.

THOUSANDS ARE WITHOUT STAMP

All Motor Vehicles Must Have Federal Stamp By July 1

A check-up at the Washington C. H. Post Office Friday morning disclosed that there are upward of 4,000 motor vehicle owners in Fayette County who must purchase their Federal Use auto stamp by July 1 or violate the law if they use their vehicles after that without the stamp displayed.

The stamp, costing $5, is the federal tax imposed to help defray cost of the war, and is good for one year.

Last year over 4,600 were sold at the Washington C. H. Post Office, and up to the present time around 850 have been sold.

This means there will be a heavy rush to obtain the stamps during the remaining days.
